Indigenous peoples are closely connected to the land through distinct traditions, unique languages, and sophisticated knowledge systems. In the Bay Area, many individuals from the Ohlone, Bay Miwok, Delta Yokut, and many more groups, continue to live on this land practicing their culture and traditions to this day.

East Bay Regional Park District strives to promote accurate and holistic depictions of Indigenous peoples in our public and school programs. These programs are not a substitute for Native voices, and we ask others to join us in learning about California Native peoples from California Native peoples.

We extend our immense gratitude to the many Native folks who have contributed – and continue to contribute – their perspectives, voices, and culture to our communities.

Visit the links below to learn more about some of the great work that Native People are doing throughout the Bay Area.
